SEPTEMBER 28, 2015

"That's post-bathtime," Timberlake said of this Silas and Biel shot.

JUSTIN & JESSICA PROUD NEW PARENTS

Justin Timberlake is in seventh heaven. The megastar, 34, shared photos of Silas, his 5-month-old son with wife Jessica Biel, on The Tonight Show September 9. Fatherhood, he told host and pal Jimmy Fallon, "is the most insanely amazing, most beautiful, unbelievable thing that can ever happen to you." Despite joking that he still has "trouble wiping my own ass," Timberlake is embracing the new responsibility. "Justin is so happy," says a source close to the couple. "He's had career success, and now he says family is the most important thing."

NONSTOP NESTING Since Silas' April birth, the couple, who wed in Italy in 2012, prefer to hang in their 12,545-square-foot L.A. pad. "They are homebodies," says the source. Biel, 33, who is set to open her kidcentric restaurant, Au Fudge, in West Hollywood this fall, has been "ordering a lot of organic food," continues the insider, "and cooking healthy meals." It's a role she relishes. "Jessica's a natural, amazing and perfect mom," her former 7th Heaven costar and longtime best friend, Beverly Mitchell, tells Us. "But there was never any doubt!"

Biel even gives her Grammy-winner husband a little friendly competition. "I sing to the baby, poor thing," the star of 2016's Devil and the Deep Blue Sea joked to E! News August 28. "I do a lot of 'Somewhere Over the Rainbow.'" Soon, she may have a larger audience. Adds the source: "They're already talking about having more kids."

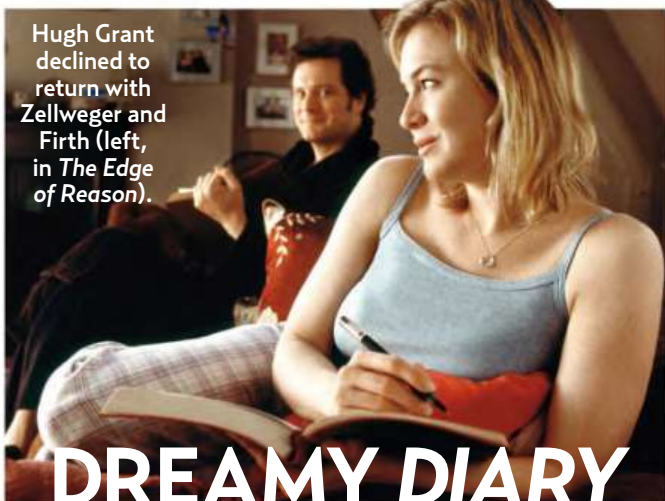

"We were watching [golf]," the new dad said, joking, "He's a good putter."

DREAMY DIARY

» The love doctor is in. For his first role since exiting Grey's Anatomy in May, Patrick Dempsey, 49, will star with Renée Zellweger and Colin Firth in Bridget Jones's Baby. "Patrick's character will be romancing Bridget," says an insider of the flick, set after 2004's sequel The Edge of Reason but before Helen Fielding's third Jones novel, Mad About the Boy. "He's really excited." Filming begins October 2!

25 Things You Don't Know About Me

Scandal's David Rosen, 49, fills Us in

Scandal returns to ABC Sept. 24 at 9 P.M.

1. My family nickname has been "Wheatie" since I was a kid.
2. In 1977, my dad took me to Pelé's last game as a New York Cosmo.
3. I once signed an autograph for someone who was sure that I was Matthew Broderick.
4. When I met my wife, Melissa [52], we had both just finished reading David Copperfield. This, combined with her sly humor and fetching looks, left me smitten.
5. As a kid, I created "The Nude Club." No one joined and we never met.

6. My last name is Polish for raspberry.

7. I am very handsome.

8. I have been blocked on Twitter by Russell Crowe, Star Jones, John Cusack, Chris Brown and Deepak Chopra.

9. I am fluent in French, Spanish, Hebrew and Portuguese.

10. I have performed Gilbert and Sullivan with the Harrisburg Symphony Orchestra twice.

11. I was thrown out of two high school varsity soccer matches for fighting.

12. John Malkovich was once rude to me in an elevator.

13. If I could have dinner with any five people, living or dead, I'd make up an excuse and eat at home with my family.

14. As kids, my older sister Toby and I would spin around until we fell over. This was called "The Dizzy Spell."

15. I believe The Godfather: Part III wasn't nearly as good as the first two movies in the series.

16. My younger sister Nicole and I played "Bag a Bear." I'd cover her head with a blanket and she'd have to guess what room I had carried her into.

17. Between us, Allison Janney and I have won six Emmy Awards.

18. I love roller coasters. I am terrified of Ferris wheels.

19. During hiatus from Scandal, my wife and I opened a flower boutique in Pacific Palisades in L.A. called Isarose. She's the creative genius; I work the cash register.

20. My mom was a musical-theater star when she was an undergrad at Cornell.

21. Michael Ian Black and I created an odd YouTube channel called Sadsadconversation.

22. I can balance a broom on my nose.

23. I have an aversion to even numbers. I would never set my alarm to a time that ends in one.

24. The finale of Bernstein's Candide always makes me cry.

25. No. 9 is a lie.

back to basics

Who you calling "basic"? To these ladies, it's either an honor — or an insult

LAUREN CONRAD

One year after lamenting that she "just got called a basic bitch," the star, 29, admitted to Cosmopolitan that she's "probably pretty basic, but . . . that's OK with me."

EMMA STONE

Instead of cringing when she read internet comments dubbing her a "bland basic bitch," the actress, 26, happily adopted the title, noting that it's "really funny."

LENA DUNHAM

Don't expect the star, 28, and love Jack Antonoff to be a cliché. "We would be more creative than to [get engaged] on New Year's," she says. "You don't want to be basic."

KATE MOSS

The model, 41, had choice words when she was kicked off a June flight for reportedly unruly conduct. "She called the pilot a basic bitch as police led her off," said an onlooker.

AZEALIA BANKS

After the 2015 MTV Video Music Awards, the rapper, 24, blasted Miley Cyrus, Taylor Swift and Nicki Minaj for making "basic ass music." As she posted September 2, "It's a contest of the basics."

ERIC & JESSICA

Her Biggest Cheerleader

Jessica Simpson gets a major assist from former NFL pro Eric Johnson.

"He is very supportive, but he's definitely a father first," the 35-year-old mom of Maxwell, 3, and Ace, 2, told Us at her fashion brand's 10th anniversary party September 9 in NYC. "And he's an amazing husband. I tell him I have to go to an approval meeting, and he's like, 'OK, I'll take Maxwell to horseback riding lessons.'" Her spouse of one year, 36, adds Simpson, "wants me to keep doing what I've been doing!"

Simpson (Sept. 9) credits dad Joe (inset) for "putting together" her fashion line deal. Mom Tina (right), she says, "keeps it going!"

"Made it to Mexico!!!"
Dillon wrote
Sept. 10.

But the Truth Be Told star, 34, and singer, 41, don't binge the Netflix thriller. "There is one episode a night. No more!"

THEIR GROWING FAMILY

Mad Max at work — and a softy at home! Tom Hardy, who is expecting his first child with wife Charlotte Riley, is "really caring and protective of his family," says a source close to the Legend star. The 38-year-old (also dad of Louis, 7, with ex Rachael Speed) and the Peaky Blinders actress, 33, enjoy their "lived-in house" in London, as the insider puts it: "There are toys everywhere!"

Riley debuted her bump at the Legend premiere in London Sept. 3.

Roper (Sept. 7) plans to move to Tolbert's Kansas City.

JADE & TANNER

Racing to the Altar

Since I was a girl, I've wanted to get married under a willow tree," says Jade Roper, whose engagement to Tanner Tolbert aired on September 7's Bachelor in Paradise. "I've been sending Tanner pictures. He's like, 'Anything you want!'" The pair, both 28, hope to wed within a year. But first, he has to meet her parents. "He called to ask for my dad's blessing," the Naturally Jade Cosmetics founder says of the finance manager. "They'll get along!"

KEEPING EACH OTHER HONEST

Chynna Phillips and William Baldwin's marriage unraveled in 2010. "It was a pretty rough five to six months," the actor, 52, tells Us. Now he's dramatizing the story of their near-divorce in Hallmark's Lead With Your Heart (September 19, 9 P.M.), a film he stars in and produced. (Phillips, 47, lends vocals.) "I felt confident we would be OK. My wife did not. . . . But we just celebrated our 20th anniversary!"

The parents of three (in March) wed in 1995.

Wilde (with her fiancé in April) posted a shot of Otis backstage at The Tonight Show watching Dad Sept. 3.

OLIVIA & JASON

Electric Chemistry

Jason Sudeikis gets lost in Olivia Wilde's eyes. When the actor, 40, and his love, 31, are apart from son Otis, 17 months, he savors "making eye contact and having a conversation where we're not concerned if a tiny person is about to electrocute himself." At their Brooklyn home, Otis is the star. "He calls me 'Dada,'" Sudeikis told Us at the September 9 Sleeping With Other People L.A. premiere. "It's mind-blowingly hilarious. I never thought it would happen."

BEYONCÉ AND JAY Z

Crazy in Amore!

Mr. and Mrs. Carter take their show to Italian seas

For his wife's 34th, Jay Z declared his love in front of millions. "This song reminds me of you and I on vacation," the 45-year-old posted September 4 under a clip of Coldplay's "Yellow" on Beyoncé's site. "It represents vulnerability; it's us in our own world." Three days later, he whisked her away to that world. "It's tradition now," an insider says of their trip to Italy. "They charter an überluxury yacht." This year, the $900,000-a-week Galactica Star transported the duo and daughter Blue, 3, from Naples to Capri, then on to the Amalfi Coast and Sardinia. Says the source, "Now that Blue's older, they enjoy showing her the places they've grown to love."

Bey rode a Jet Ski Sept. 11! "They're having a ball," says a source.

"They both always work so hard, these vacations are their favorite thing," a source says of the couple (in Sardinia Sept. 12).

He's Out of Chances

Kourtney Kardashian means business. Two months after dumping boyfriend Scott Disick, the reality star, 36, has zero interest in reconciling. "They're amicable for their kids," says an insider, "but Kourtney is officially done." Instead, she's focusing on Mason, 5, Penelope, 3, and Reign, 9 months. "It's hard for her, but she's moving in the right direction," says a second source. Not so for Disick, 32, adds the source: "Scott misses his family, but it's not enough to motivate him to change." Indeed, the hard-partier — who recently had a fling with Kimberly Stewart, 36, as *U*s reported — has yet to curb his drinking and pill habit. Says the source, "He doesn't have the constitution to cure himself of his issues."

in attendance. And one South African socialite — Chelsy Davy, Harry's college sweetheart — is flying 8,500 miles for the occasion. Promises the friend, "It's going to be quite a party."

And just like old times. During a three-month summer tour of Africa to raise awareness for conservation causes, Harry — who split with girlfriend of nearly two years Cressida Bonas in 2014 — secretly reconnected with Davy, the bubbly corporate attorney he dated on and off from 2004 to 2011. "They decided they would like to give their relationship another chance," says a close Harry source. "They still have strong feelings for each other." So strong, in fact, that friends believe the once hard-partying prince may put a ring on the 29-year-old. Serving 10 years in the military, including two tours in Afghanistan, taught Harry to value family over frivolity, says a source: He longs for the "beautiful life" his brother, Prince William, shares with wife Duchess Kate, both 33. "Harry talks a lot about wanting to get married," continues the insider. Children are on the wish list too. As he told a reporter in New Zealand in May, "Of course, I would love to have kids right now."

INSIDE THE REUNION

Harry and Davy's romance reignited over dinner and a movie. In February — one month after Davy split with her British boyfriend of two years, jeweler Charles Goode, 31 — she visited London. There, she and Harry "got in touch again," says the friend. "Their split was dramatic but they never hated each other." Harry, who "held a flame for her for a long time, as she did for him," according to the pal, began inviting her to meals. He even arranged a private screening of a newly released romantic blockbuster. "Harry kept most of this to himself at the time," continues the friend, "but I wasn't surprised when he admitted they had been meeting."

When Davy returned to South Africa, they stayed in constant contact "mostly via FaceTime or messaging," says the Harry friend. And though he briefly flirted with Doctor Who actress Jenna Coleman at a May polo match, Harry's mind was on Davy. Through lengthy conversations, he and Davy began to believe they could overcome the obstacles that had driven them apart. "That," says the pal, "was when they started thinking about getting back together."

conservation led him directly to Davy. Says a source, "He chose the itinerary himself based on his own interest." In between his official duties, Harry was able to see Davy. "Chelsy flew to visit him at least twice," says the friend. "And I know they spent time in South Africa as well."

Davy's parents, Charles, a wealthy landowner and safari operator, and Beverley, a former model, offered the couple a hideaway at their Cape Town compound. "Harry's so close with her family that visiting Chelsy was easy," continues the friend. "He could stay at their place without word getting out." Away from the spotlight, Harry and Chelsy got to know each other again.

MAKING IT WORK

After all, the two are not the same people they were a decade ago. Davy was a fourth-year student at Cheltenham College boarding school in Cheltenham, Gloucestershire, England, when she was introduced by a friend to Harry, who was taking a yearlong break after high school. They “had a very feisty relationship,” Marcia Moody, author of Harry: A Biography, tells Us. “They were loving, but very turbulent.” (A source says he affectionately nicknamed her “Trouble.”) Often, they were separated by thousands of miles. While Davy moved on to the University of Cape Town the next year, Harry entered the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst in Camberley, Surrey. By the time she enrolled in law school at the University of Leeds in West Yorkshire, England, in 2007, he had begun his overseas deployments and was training as an Army soldier.

Dad Drama

Davy has one family scandal in her past that might give the royals pause. In 2000, when Zimbabwe president Robert Mugabe seized property from white owners in a violent land grab, Davy's father, Charles, managed to keep much of his several hundred thousand-acre game-hunting operation. For years, critics accused him of trading on his business relationship with a Mugabe crony. "Rubbish," Charles wrote in a 2011 letter to the Zim Diaspora paper, claiming he'd lost 10,000 cattle.

clubs than spending quality time. "They partied a lot," says the Harry friend. "Their evenings out involved being in big groups of friends and drinking." Lunches at local pizza parlors or in pubs were just as entertaining. "They liked to joke around," says a friend of the pair. "Harry would tell Chelsy she had something stuck in her teeth when she didn't — that type of thing."

But Davy became frustrated by Harry's devil-may-care attitude. "He wanted to hold on to his lad life too," says a Harry confidant. "So he would sometimes avoid Chelsy if they'd been hanging around together too much." That led to nasty fights. After one 2009 argument, Davy changed her Facebook status to "single," sending the British press into a frenzy. The Daily Mail reported, "Miserable Chelsy Splits From Prince Harry."

Davy also wasn't sold on the prospect of being a princess. At House of Windsor gatherings, such as William's April 29, 2011, wedding to Kate, which Davy attended as Harry's plus-one, she got an unvarnished look at life in The Firm (the royal family's in-house nickname). "Harry has always liked women who are headstrong, extremely confident and intelligent," says the Harry source. "Unfortunately, that type of woman is usually not so into the idea of marrying into a royal family and giving up on the life she has already created for herself." Davy, adds the insider, "was so against the idea of ditching everything to become a submissive royal wife."

Since then, both Harry and Davy have evolved. "The things they're looking for in life have changed," says the source. "Neither of them goes out like they used to, and Harry would love to settle down. He's enjoying so many awesome things in terms of life experience, but he does get lonely." The prince nearly admitted as much during the May interview in New Zealand: "It would be great to have someone else next to me to share the pressure."

Nowadays, Harry, who retired from the Army in June, envies the life of his neighbors. A few steps away from his own Nottingham

They drove in Scotland Sept. 13.

A New Look for Kate

» She's bangin'! The Duchess of Cambridge debuted a new 'do September 13 during an end-of-summer family trip to visit the queen at Scotland's Balmoral Castle. With Prince William behind the wheel, Kate was photographed for the first time in seven weeks, heading to church services at Crathie Kirk. "This summer has been their quietest so far in terms of being able to just focus on family life," says a source close to the parents of George, 2, and Charlotte, 4 months. The family has been nesting at Anmer Hall, their 10-bedroom country estate in Norfolk, England, where Charlotte is quite content. "She's a breeze," says the source. "She'll lie in her cot smiling or making little noises, but she doesn't have George's famously loud lungs!"

Cottage, Apartment 1A at Kensington Palace is the London home of William, Kate and their kids, George and Charlotte. "Harry sees what William and Kate have and wants that," the friend says of the university roommates, who broke up once before making it to the altar. Along with family, his career is a primary focus. Currently transitioning to a role working with the British Army assisting wounded veterans, Harry, says a source, "feels everything in his life has great meaning and purpose."

Suddenly, Davy finds the idea of living la vida Windsor more appealing. "She has seen that Harry can live as he wants but still continue to serve the country," says the friend. "It's proving to her that Harry is bucking tradition and doing his own thing. And he wants it to be the same for his wife."

THE ROAD AHEAD

Davy may be willing to go the distance to make Harry's dreams come true. The attorney, who left the U.K. firm Allen & Overy in 2014, is looking into positions in London, says a source. "She always said she wouldn't come back. There was nothing in the city for her once she and Harry broke up and she hated the weather," says the pal. "But it seems she's had a change of heart." A Davy friend warns that the couple won't rush to an engagement: "They are both cautious. They don't want to hurt themselves or each other."

Until Davy moves, Harry will travel to her. In November, after he completes official trips to the United States (to promote the 2016 Invictus Games in Washington, D.C.) and Lesotho (for the opening of a center for HIV-afflicted children), he will tour South Africa. Says the friend, "We're all hoping for a new chapter in Harry's relationship with Chelsy." And a happy ending.

Make Way for

K
N

Mindy Kaling has a problem. “My car won’t start,” the actress, 36, told Us over the phone July 28. “I’m panicking a little bit — this has not happened to me since my twenties!” It’s a minor bump in what has been a steady climb to the top for the Cambridge, Massachusetts, native. In the last five years, every woman’s fantasy best friend has published a bestselling book of essays

(Is Everyone Hanging Out Without Me?), received an Emmy nod for her writing on The Office and created The Mindy Project, the show she produces, writes and stars in as Ob-Gyn Mindy Lahiri. (Season 4 streams Tuesdays on Hulu.) “My life has changed so much,” the single, multihyphenate star admits. But it has all helped inspire her new collection, Why Not Me? (out now), 21 laugh-out-loud tales that range from her dalliance with sorority life at Dartmouth College to her romance with a White House staffer. “I couldn’t believe how much I wanted to say!” she says. Kaling gets wordy with Us.

What's the story behind the title?

People are always surprised by my confidence, so I thought I should tackle that straight on. I don't necessarily look like someone who would star on their own TV show — but that wouldn't stop me. The title also has another meaning. My friends all got married around 34, and I felt those anxieties of "Why not me? Why am I being left behind?"

What is your writing process like?

I work a lot on planes, but my first draft is always done in bed. Literally, not 1 percent of my book was written at a desk.

You're also writing a book with your best friend, B.J. Novak. What's the latest?

It's still so nascent, but it's a book of comedy essays. Neither he nor I have had writing partners, and we have strong personalities, so I'm not sure how it will work. [Laughs.] But it's an opportunity to find out!

What can viewers expect with The Mindy Project's move from Fox to Hulu?

When we first heard the news, we had the same instinct that anyone would have — the world is our oyster! But then I reined it back in. We're not interested in adding sexual stuff just because we can. A lot of girls watch the show with their parents, and I don't want that to change.

So, any spoilers?

Mindy will obviously have her baby in a really theatrical way, but now that the season has 26 episodes [up from 21], I don't know how the season will end!

Maybe with a wedding to baby-daddy Danny?

I love romance. I love courtship. But I don't fetishize a wedding day. I know my viewers do, and designing a wedding dress for my character would be the best thing ever! We might do that . . . but I can't responsibly say.

Clearly, you love fashion. Next stop, designer?

I love clothes so much that I always fantasize about having my own line called New Money. The clothes are bright and have bling. They're designed for pop stars to wear on tour. The name is perfect for my design aesthetic, which is go big or go home.

Speaking of dream jobs, who is Mindy Lahiri's ideal patient?

In my mind, Mindy Lahiri has written Taylor Swift many letters beseeching her to take her on as a doctor. She's like, "I could come on the road with you and be your on-call Ob-Gyn!" And Taylor's lawyers have had to send her a cease and desist letter. US

Her Favorite Things

HAPPY TUNE Ever since it popped up on a playlist, Kaling can't get enough of "The Suburbs" by Arcade Fire. "It always puts me in a good mood," she says.

A DOUBLE TAP The Instagram junkie shows her praise with the 100 sign emoji: "I use it any time my friends do anything remotely impressive."

SUGAR RUSH Breakfast of champions? At the start of her 19-hour workday, Kaling admits, "I usually have a handful of Sour Patch Kids and a Diet Coke."

TV DATE Comedy by day, suspense by night! "I'm constantly talking about Peaky Blinders," she reveals. "It's a very violent English crime drama."

FOND OBJECT "I keep a pair of my mom's old scrubs folded in a special place in my closet," she says of the late Ob-Gyn, who died of pancreatic cancer in 2012.

"Chic maternity clothes" are the best part about playing pregnant, says Kaling (on set this summer).

THE WALK

October 9

» Acrophobics, beware! Aided by a French accent and CGI, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, 34, transforms into high-wire artist Philippe Petit — and re-creates his 1974 walk between the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center in NYC. The actor tells Us about his balancing act.

Did you really walk the wire?

I was on a wire in the air — [but nowhere close] to 110 stories. The positive rush you get when you're in the sweet spot, keeping your balance, it's more than just a physical sensation. It's mentally soothing.

And a good workout?

For [2013's] Don Jon, I gained

12 pounds of muscle doing old-fashioned bodybuilder stuff. But for The Walk, training on the wire, I actually got a lot more fit. Bigger is not really healthier.

You worked closely with Petit. His most useful advice?

When we were practicing on a wire just a couple feet off the ground, he said, "You never fall. Never even say the word fall. When you are ready, you decide to 'step off' the wire."

Any tips on mastering a French accent?

The secret is you have to pout your lips, which is why French women talk so sexy.

Tom Hanks

As a shrewd lawyer, the two-time winner, 59, grounds Cold War thriller Bridge of Spies (October 16).

Meryl Streep

Streep, 66, has but one scene in feminist drama Suffragette (October 23). Can it earn her a 20th nod?

Bill Murray

The one-time nominee, 64, charms as a has-been music manager in Rock the Kasbah (October 23).

BURNT

October 23

Bradley Cooper's Adam Jones is cooking up a comeback. Though the former rock-star chef almost derailed his career because of drugs, he's set on opening a new restaurant in London. To get kitchen ready for the drama (costarring Sienna Miller), the actor, 40, turned to Gordon Ramsay. "As well as giving Bradley a few top tips on cooking," Ramsay has said, "I've taught him the most important thing he needs to know in order to get by in a kitchen: how to swear."

SPECTRE

November 6

He's the first Bond that's made me cry," Naomie Harris, 39 (a.k.a. Money Penny), tells Us of Daniel Craig, 47. This time, the British secret agent jets from Mexico City to Rome to take down a sinister group. And he emotes. Adds Harris: "You care about his journey."

To writer-director Billy Ray, Nicole Kidman is an angel. "It was a gift from heaven to have Nicole in the role," he says of casting his thriller's district attorney, Claire. She romances an FBI agent (Chiwetel Ejiofor, above) while overseeing his investigation of a girl's murder. (The victim's mom is played by Julia Roberts.) In casting the mom of four, 48, Ray says he scored a star who convinces as both "a credible DA and the girl you can't get over. Nicole checks both of those boxes. Everybody was in awe of her."

QUEEN OF THE EMPIRE

Taraji P. Henson says
she's one fortunate Cookie

Taraji P. Henson can no longer browse at T.J. Maxx. "I'd have to go at a weird hour and dress like the Unabomber," the actress, 45, jokes to Us. Indeed, her profile has risen since she brought convict turned wisecracking music exec Cookie Lyon into American living rooms. The leopard print-clad standout of Fox's hit Empire (returning September 23 at 9 P.M.), says Henson, "is everybody's spirit animal!" Nominated for an Emmy, the Washington, D.C., native and single mom of Marcel, 21, tells it like it is.

Q: Do fans assume you're like Cookie?

They will call me Cookie, and I'm like, "That's not my name!" I'm not her — I'm not a fur girl. I'm a PETA girl. And I think selling drugs is a horrible thing. . . . I'm not trying to go to prison!

Q: Any funny encounters?

I get pictures from people who dress their pets and babies up like Cookie.

Q: Will Cookie's wardrobe evolve?

She was in jail for 17 years and came out behind the curveball of fashion. But in the second season, we're getting so much love from fashion houses. Moschino, Balmain, Chanel . . . You name it, we got it — and Cookie wears it!

Q: Are you close with your TV sons?

They're constantly at my house! I cook for them. I just had a conversation with Yazz [Bryshere Y. Gray, who plays Hakeem] about saving his money. They're really like my sons.

"We've become a family," says Henson (with costar Trai Byers).

"She knows talent and has the gift of gab," Henson says of her character Cookie.

"We have a happy house," says Le Bon, who has been wed to model Yasmin, 50, for 30 years.

DURAN DURAN'S RETURN

Simon Le Bon dishes on the band's 14th album

» Even after 34 years of pumping out pop classics such as 1982's "Rio" and 1993's "Ordinary World," Duran Duran are still hungry to make you dance. "There's nothing more satisfying than seeing people getting their rocks off as you're playing your songs," says the British group's singer, Simon Le Bon, 56, who just released Paper Gods, his 14th disc, with bandmates Nick Rhodes, 53, John Taylor,

55, and Roger Taylor, 55. "We also like letting them inside our heads." GIRL ON SONG The icons are so loyal to their superfans (Jennifer Aniston told the father of three she waited outside his hotel as a teen) that they enlisted one of their most vocal, Lindsay Lohan, 29, to speak on the album's sexy "Dancephobia." Raves Le Bon, "I thought she'd do a magnificent job. And boy, did she!"

How Ellie Tackles Triathlon Training

On September 20, Kemper (and her former costar!) are off to the races. She shares her prep plan with Us

Office bonding at its finest: As Ellie Kemper preps for her third Nautica Malibu Triathlon, she stays in touch with teammates Paul Lieberstein (her costar on the NBC hit) and producer Brent Forrester. “We’ve been texting inspirational mantras!” she jokes. Not that the Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt star, 35, needs an extra push to ace the 4-mile run portion of the race (which raises funds for cancer research). “I want to crush the competition!” she says. The Missouri native, wed to writer Michael Koman, keeps pace with Us.

Q: What does it take to prepare for a race like this?

I am not a professional athlete, so I’ve probably been doing everything wrong. I’ve just been trying to stick to a regular schedule. . . . I run four times a week — usually 6 miles on both Saturday and Sunday, and the other runs are around 3 or 4 miles.

Q: Are you pumping iron too?

I love Bar Method classes for strengthening. We do light weights there, but I don’t do any beyond that. I played field hockey in college and I would cheat in our sessions there. Lifting weights hurts my arms!

Q: Did you change your diet?

I’ve been trying to eat more healthfully. . . . Bananas are great energy right before a workout, I’ve found. I also love Kind bars. Overall, I tend to eat a lot of whole grains and green vegetables. I probably undo a lot of that with my ice cream habit, but a lady has got to live!

Q: Your character Kimmy wears old-school sneakers. What would she think of your running shoes?

They might be too serious for her. They don’t even light up!

Kemper (competing in 2012) gets pumped by blasting Sia and Kanye West.

“There will be fabulous guest stars!” Kemper (left, with Jane Krakowski) says of season 2 of her Netflix hit.

OPENS FRIDAY 9/18

Everest

Jake Gyllenhaal's amazing mountain-set thriller will make you gasp for air

Stuck atop the highest peak in the world, nobody can hear you scream. That's what makes this white-knuckler, about a doomed real-life trek up Mt. Everest, a harrowing and haunting force of nature. It was mapped out perfectly: In 1996, experienced New Zealand guide Rob Hall (Jason Clarke) and his friendly rival, laid-back American Scott Fischer (Jake Gyllenhaal), set out to lead their respective clients up Everest. Despite the obvious danger — only airplanes are built to function at 29,000 feet — the group is determined to reach its goal. The cost is fatal. A fierce storm soon hits, leaving the climbers to fend for themselves in holy-hell conditions. The drama is unbearably gut-wrenching as a stranded Hall speaks to his pregnant wife (Keira Knightley) via a satellite phone. Baltasar Kormákur directs the chaos with dizzying award-worthy authenticity; at times, you're unsure whether to be awed by the majestic 3-D scenery or shudder at the horror surrounding it. (If only it were easier to decipher everyone underneath all that protective outerwear!) Still, the most chilling moment occurs after the credits roll as you realize the true enemy isn't the unforgiving mountain — it's the irrational will to scale it.

OPENS FRIDAY 9/18

Black Mass

The good news: After a string of lazy performances, Johnny Depp has returned to superior acting form. Too bad his boilerplate drama is not as dynamic as it should be. In the 1970s, real-life Irish Boston mobster Jimmy "Whitey" Bulger (Depp) cut a secret deal with the FBI to rat out the Italian Mafia. But the self-assured Bulger still literally gets away with murder because his agent liaison on the inside (Joel Edgerton, superb) is a loyal childhood chum. The story plods along aimlessly and without much style — Bulger sees a threat; brutally kills him (or her); repeat as necessary. Oh, how you'll be wishing for some Scorsese-like panache.

Bulger tells his cohort that the FBI deal is a "business opportunity."

OPENS FRIDAY 9/18

Sicario

There's no justice if Emily Blunt isn't Oscar-nominated for her role in this gritty crime saga. She plays a by-the-book FBI agent who joins a task force on the hunt for a Mexican drug lord. The actress shows her mettle gunning down a henchman at the border — and yet she astounds when revealing her vulnerable side. The film turns generic when she's off screen.

Pawn Sacrifice

The most famous chess player in history was an eccentric Brooklyn-bred child prodigy named Bobby Fischer. This well-crafted biopic, starring Tobey Maguire as the boy wonder, focuses on his quest to unseat the Russian world champ (Liev Schreiber). Though Fischer remains an enigma, the movie rivets across the board.

Minority Report

If Stark Sands is our future, we're in good shape! In this action-packed sci-fi series — a slightly lighter sequel to the 2002 Tom Cruise flick — the Broadway actor personifies frazzled courage as Dash, a "precog" who can predict violent crimes. Nicely paired with soothing detective Lara (Meagan

Sands (with Good) conceals his psychic abilities.

Good), he rushes to stop killings in 2065 Washington, D.C. (Too bad casting fail Wilmer Valderrama slows the ride as Lara's cocky superior.) And despite the move to the small screen, the special effects remain dazzling. Those pesky — and clever — holographic ads pop up everywhere! (Fox, 9 P.M.)

MONDAY 9/21

Life in Pieces

This comedy mimics Modern Family with flair. The format: A revealing vignette focuses on one member of the frenzied Short clan, then all unite. Before the funeral that caps the wacky premiere, son Greg (Colin Hanks) fumbles helping wife Jen (Zoe Lister-Jones) ease her postdelivery pain "down there." Adorable screwball grandparents James Brolin and Dianne Wiest, however, are Life's blood. (CBS, 8:30 P.M.)

MONDAY 9/21

Castle

Like a chameleon, this often cheeky, sometimes dark crime drama keeps changing color — to good effect. The tense season 8 opener goes for fun-house noir. When wife Kate (Stana Katic) vanishes, sleuth Castle (Nathan Fillion) goes on a frantic hunt complete with a tarantula-toting thug and moody chase scenes. Toks Olagundoye, a cast newbie, also kicks butt as security pro Hayley. Can't wait to see the story from Kate's POV next week! (ABC, 10 P.M.)

NEW ON VIDEO

Me and Earl and the Dying Girl

You will ugly-cry on your couch like there's no tomorrow. So what. This deeply affecting coming-of-age indie is a tiny masterpiece. Greg (Thomas Mann) is a detached high school nobody perfectly content hanging out and making spoof movies with his best friend, Earl (RJ Cyler). That is until his mom (Connie Britton) makes him do a "good deed" and befriend a classmate (Olivia Cooke) recently diagnosed with leukemia. But this is not some cutesy or supersappy love story: The teens talk and behave like teens, which means the two bicker and cower and emote and make dumb mistakes. And yet, they support each other in the most beautiful ways. See for yourself. (Amazon and iTunes, $15)
